

Ian is Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Dispute Resolution Initiative at Singapore Management University. He has been a practising mediator for over 30 years, in commercial, environmental, policy, intercultural, family, online mediation and other fields. He has also been a mediation trainer for professional associations, the World Health Organisation, NGOs, and in Law Schools. He is a member of the Independent Standards Commission of the International Mediation); and a member of the IMI's Task Force on Intercultural Mediation accreditation. He was until recently a member of the Principal Mediator Panel of the Singapore Mediation Centre, and a mediator with the Healthcare Mediation Service; and a Fellow of the National Center for Technology and Dispute Resolution [<http://odr.info/fellows/>]. He is co-editor of Ethnic Conflict and Secessionism in South and South East Asia (Sage, 2003); contributing author of Dispute Resolution in New Zealand (OUP 1999), and of Guidelines for Family Mediation (Butterworths, 1995) and contributing author to An Asian Perspective on Mediation.

